APR 1 8 1966

EXAMINER EXAMINER Sec. Page Sunday Punch Auctions Bridge II 5 Business III 7.11 CHRONICLE Sec. Page Sunday Punch Page 1 Delaplane Page 5 Editorial Page 1 Lonne Page 1

Chronicle's Newhall, Examiner's Gould: A split personality on Sunday

Sex, Sin and Synergism

As the promotion copy touts it, San Francisco advertisers and newspaper readers are getting a "synergistic" reaction for their money—"the simultaneous action of separate agencies which, together, have greater total effect than the sum of their individual effects."

But to many, the chemistry has produced confusion. The de Young family's Chronicle and Hearst's Examiner-which merged into a jointly owned corporation seven months ago-continue as rivals six days a week; but on Sundays, there is total schizophrenia. The new combine's page one masthead reads, San Francisco Examiner; on the same page, the index is headed, San Francisco Sunday Examiner & Chronicle. And the index itself is split in two. The editorials of both papers appear on separate pages. In New York City, where a similar merger is under way (story right), editors are looking toward San Francisco apprehensively. As of now, New York's new Sunday World Journal and Tribune plans only one editorial page, but the paper will be schizoid in other departments.

STAT

Spark: San Francisco's Sunday paper is largely a patchwork of wire copy and syndicated features threaded only occasionally by locally generated stories. More than 50 columns lean on each other. Two editors oversee this profusion of copy. But, as if determined to maintain a split personality, the Sunday paper has no over-all editor.

If the product often seems bizarre, so can working for it. To keep the spark of competition alive, Chronicle executive editor Scott Newhall posted a notice in the paper's third-floor city room just after the merger, warning that any staff member found on the second floor, where the Examiner was to set up its city room, would be fired. Because of many delays, however, the opportunities for city-room espionage have been limited until this week, when the Examiner editorial side finally makes the three-block move from its old building. "Production and distribution problems are still plaguing us," acknowledges Examiner publisher Charles Gould. "We're still fighting typographical errors and we have make-up problems."

Since moving from the morning into the afternoon field following the merger, the Examiner slowly has improved; local political coverage is now more extensive and typography more readable. The Chronicle, on the other hand, has been playing up sex as if it were discovered yesterday. For weeks, page one has carried banner headlines such as INSIDE A NUDE PARTY, A NUDE MODEL'S STORY and the 'it' LOOK IN SEX. Last week, an eight-column streamer read stew-ARDESS 'SECRETS' with the overline, Cupcakes in the Sky. "He reached up and playfully patted that portion of her nearest him," the article pants. "She admonished: 'Watch it!' I have been,' he replied, 'ever since take-off'."

The 52-year-old Newhall, 31 years on the paper, sees nothing wrong with the stories. "I consider the social habits of the population as being perfectly respectable news," he says. "The Chronicle is more in touch with contemporary culture and behavior enterns than any paper in this country."

'Contempt': Thee urid, sensational journalism has los anch of its sales pull throughout the country, San Francisco may be an exception. Chronicle officials claim that we in the paper gave big play to a party o' the East Bay Sexual Freedom League, circulation jumped 10,000. Nevertheless, some San Franciscans are fed up. "The Chronicle has vast contempt for its readership," says one former employee, who now gets most of his news from the comprehensive San Jose Mercury, published 40 miles to the southeast, and from The Los Angeles Times. "There's one nice thing," says another San Franciscan. "You can read everything in the weekday in two minutes. The Sunday paper takes five minutes and it frees you to watch TV.

Before the merger last fall, the Examiner and the Chronicle, battling one another in the morning field, were both losing money. Now, having set themselves up in noncompetitive fields in the morning and afternoon and having lopped off 800 employees, the financial picture is better. From a pre-merger weekday circulation of 361,527, the Chronicle has jumped to nearly 500,000. The Examiner is down from a premerger 303,092 to about 220,000. The total circulation of the two Sunday papers before the merger (more than 800,000) is about the same for the new combination. But the count that counts -ad linage-tells the real story. Despite the conversion to a single paper, linage on Sunday is down less than half. And on weekdays, both papers have gained for a combined total of more than I million. "From an advertising standpoint," says one executive of the combination, "the merger is a tremendous success."

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release @ 50-Yr 2014/02/10 : CIA-RDP74-00115R000300070013-2

JUN 20 1965

OUR GIRL IN RED CHINA-

AN INSIDE REPORT

ISA HOBBS holds an infant on the Vietnamese People's Friendship Commune outside Peking The boy's grandmother looks on as they stand outside the family's one-room dwelling.

Red China, the world's most populous land, is also the world's biggest question mark. Since the Communists seized power and erected their Bamboo Curtain, American journalists have been barred from parting its strands.

But now Lisa Hobbs, staff writer for the San Francisco Examiner and Hearst Headline Service, has managed to penetrate that curtain to provide U.S. readers with an intimate look at life in Communist China today.

The mother of two children, Reporter Hobbs ran the risk of constant discovery in a land hostile to everything American. During 22 days in Red China, she was able to assess the Peking regime's anti-American propaganda campaign, the attitude of the "man in the street," the poverty and congestion of urban life.

Behind the Bamboo Curtain, she found, the women dance with bayonets, rather than babies, in their arms; the children are taught to shout slogans; and the European correspondents who report that things are looking up for Mao's masses are "guilty of verbal inflation."

The first of Miss Hobbs' special reports on the Question Mark of the Modern World—Inside Red China, starts today on Page 15.

Dontinued

Lisa Hobbs, S. F. Staffer, Visits China

SAN FRANCISCO
Lisa Allan Hobbs, San Francisco Examiner staffer, has crowned a global reporting career with a 4,000-mile tour of Communist China. She is the first reporter from a U. S. newspaper to enter Red China in almost a decade.

Mrs. Hobbs, a native of Warrnambool, Tasmania, posed as an Australian tourist to make a three-week tour of the country. Her series of articles will begin in the Examiner and other Hearst newspapers Sunday, June 20. She has returned to her home here.

A few years ago Mrs. Hobbs spent two weeks in Hong Kong in a vain effort to obtain entry to China for an Examiner report.

Photo Problem

This time, photo problems were her big problem. Mrs. Hobbs carried two cameras. She had to rely on color film because her black and white camera failed on the first day inside China and she could not locate any shop able to make repairs.

Ed J. Dooley, editor of the Examiner, expressed enthusiasm for the reports Mrs. Hobbs has prepared for publication. Already the news woman is besieged with requests for special appearances, he advised.

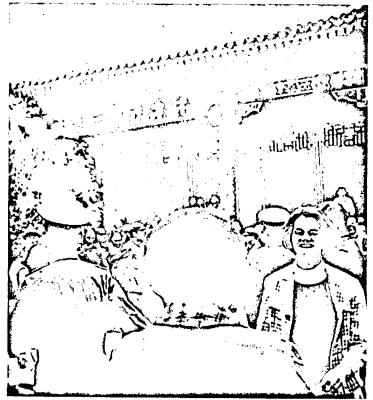

Mrs. Hobbs came to special attention earlier this year when Gale Cook, city editor, assigned her to write a series about rest homes in the San Francisco area. These brought letters, comment — and tears — to the woman who began her career on a now defunct newspaper in the Australian island state.

Previously she had spanned much of the world following her departure from the Tasmanian town with a name meaning "big wind."

Variety Her Dish

Throughout her career her field has been general reporting. In Warrnambool even her society reporting included dirt track races, trotting events, football and foot racing.

At the Melbourne Argus she worked under the Australian apprentice system. One graduates upward from "D" grade or cub reporter to A grade, top reporter, with general news work marking each bracket.

Lisa Allan Hobbs of the San Francisco Examiner smiles triumphantly (at right) during her three-week tour inside Red China.

crimes and crashes and other major news. Assigned to the Argus' Fleet Street staff in London, Mrs. Hobbs covered Queen Elizabeth's Coronation. Her editor was the only member of the Argus organization to get into Westminster for the actual coronation ceremony.

Jailed in Egypt

Before Red China, her biggest story came in Egypt. There she was jailed during the early days of President Gamal Nasser's regime after she had sent a cable derogatory to the new administration. She won her release on her own, in five hours.

Lisa Allan became Lisa Hobbs and a U. S. citizen on entering this country with her American husband. But it took her a year of effort to get on the Examiner staff five years ago, probably because of confusion between two former editors, each of whom thought the other had hired her, Mrs. Hobbs claimed smilingly.

Merger to Leave San Francisco With 2 Newspapers, Jointly Printed

By LAWRENCE E. DAVIES

The consolidation, which fol-what was revealed.

In the consolidation, which fol-what was revealed.

In the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation.

The figures—publishers' statements required by the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation.

The figures—publishers' statements required by the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation.

The figures—publishers' statements required by the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation.

The figures—publishers' statements required by the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation.

The figures—publishers' statements required by the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation.

The figures—publishers' statements required by the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation of the consolidation.

The consolidation of the consolidatio cial union chapel meeting held The late last night.

the papers outlined the plans about 800, of whom roughly to the heads of all newspaper continuous.

A source close to the manner that the manner fit that the new propers for the manner that the trade magazine, Editor and continuous.

Chronicle, daily 26.074.479

The advertising lineage of the lit said: "The Examiner thus papers for 1964, as reported by is the foundation of the greatest newspaper group in the history of America."

Chronicle, daily 26.074.479

After years of steadily los-and Sunday operation, will be staff over here are not too those surviving a long series of management had been able to get approval of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The News Call Bulletin, also Hearst-owned, and publish as an afternoon paper six days a week, possibly to be called the Examiner-News Bulletin.

There will be a Sunday paper bearing the names of both The Examiner and The Chronicle.

Examiner and The Chronicle.

Examiner are not too those surviving a long series of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

He was murdered eight months later by a politician he had accused of vote fraud.

The Call was started as a deficit and that the combination of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

The successful argument, it months later by a politician he had accused of vote fraud.

The Call was started as a deficit and that the combination of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

The successful argument is was said, was that both Hearst papers here were operating at morning paper on Dec. 1, 1856, to find the there's management had been able to get approval of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

The successful argument is the find the Hearst management had been able to get approval of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

The successful argument is management had been able to get approval of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

The successful argument is management had been able to get approval of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

The successful argument is management had been approval of the Antitrust Division for a combination armangement with The Chronicle.

The successful argument is management with The Chronicle.

The Successful argument is management had accused of vote fraud.

The Call was started as a deficit and that the comb

New Corporation Planned

The printers union statement, source said:

Signed by Russell A. Wagle, "In past situations compapresident, and Leon Olson, first rable to this, there has been a vice, president, of Local 21, said lot of heavy drinking among that under management's an-staffers. Today everybody who political opponent. His brother died in 1924 and was succeeded would terminate next Saturday shown up, sober and working, and a new corporation, the San Francisco Printing Company, of the story "Special to The Would take over on Sunday."

Another source said that each Examine "-Charles De Young was mundered in 1880 by the sen of a that for the publishing operations would be spread around among the several plants.

Charles De Young was mundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations would be spread around among the several plants.

Charles De Young was mundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations would be spread around among the several plants.

Charles De Young was mundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations. One source said that for the publishing printing and other cost-sharing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing printing and other cost-sharing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations.

Charles De Young was nundered in 1880 by the sen of a three publishing operations. The printers union statement, source said:

Examiner or The Chronicle tives said they understood that would be the controlling force tives said they understood that the Sunday paper.

The Examiner, some executing publishing controlling force tives said they understood that the first acquired The Call the Sunday paper would be print 1914, along with The Post, in the Sunday paper.

A spokesman for the News-lieved, would contribute its Sun-letin.

Special to The New York Times paper Guild, which has con-day magazine, called This paper Guild This paper Guild, which has con-day magazine, called This paper Guild This paper Guild, which has con-day magazine, called This paper Guild This

The Examiner's total is around 1,900, with about 225 The session followed a meet-in the editorial department 188,108. ing at which managements of The News Call Bulletin has the address of the control of the session followed a meet-in the editorial department.

agement said a statement might gram left them in a more enlines: Sund not be issued until later in the viable situation than employes 37,209,447.

A source close to the man members felt that the new program agement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement said a statement might gram left them in a more ensurement suit successions. Sunday 11,134,968; total station KRON. The Chronicle, with Mr. Thierot as publisher and Scott Newhall as executive 40,755,429.

News-Call Bulletin, 14,155,144 lines.

News-Call Bulletin, 14,155,144 lines.

By last work it was reported by Justice Department sources in Washington that the Hearst management had been able to get approval of the Antitrust by the silence of management, sections. The chronicle, they be- 1929 and created The Call-Bul-A spokesman for the News- lieved, would contribute its Sun- letin.

Examiner: daily 303,092, Sun-

News-Call Bulletin,

Another source said that each Examina "-Chronicle-News-Call paper would continue to pay Bulletin".

and control its own editorial and news staffers say that many news staffs rather than leaving cynical feelings about the this to the new production comethics of the newspaper business have been confirmed. May-newspaper of the late William newspaper of the late Willi At The Examiner, some execu- his publishing empire.

For many years The Examiner culation. dominated the morning field, surpassing The Chronicle both statements required by the in circulation and advertising.

Heyday of Hearst

In 1930, The Examiner in a y 436,076.

Chronicle, daily 360,527, Sun-like nation reads the Hearst press" and listed 28 publications daily with 6,000,000 Sunday circulation.

The advertising lineage of the lt said: "The Examiner thus othing around here but conusion. Nobody knows which end to up."

Everybody Sober

At The Examiner an editorial their teens. It was called The pose an agreement for joint ource said:

Dramatic Chronicle and was publishing, printing and other cost-sharing operations.

in the Sunday paper. | the Sunday paper would be pri- in 1914, along with The Post,

These questions, along with marily an Examiner operation and put them out as an afterwhere the papers would be with that paper contributing noon newspaper. The Hearst inwhere the papers would be with that paper contributing noon newspaper. The Bulletin in

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release @ 50-Yr 2014/02/10: CIA-RDP74-00115R000300070013-2

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release @ 50-Yr 2014/02/10 : CIA-RDP74-00115R000300070013-2 10 July 1964

NEWSPAPERS

What to Read in the Cow Palace

As the site of a national political convention, San Francisco offers many advantages—which may be why the Hagger's other Son Francisco Republican Party has chosen it twice in eight years. Its precipitous hills produce women long and firm of limb. It abounds with good hotels, fine restaurants and postcard vistas. It also fields three dailies favorably disposed to the Republican cause: Hearst's morning Examiner, the morning Chronicle, and Hearst's evening News Call Bulletin. To this triad must be added a fourth: the Oakland Tribune, published just across the bay by former Republican ment is the Parks and Recreation De-U.S. Senator William Knowland. But if delegates to next week's convention depend on the four dailies for compre- land's Oakland Tribune that may quite hensive accounts of their activities, they may be disappointed.

most successful is the Chronicle. Once water months before the California Re- were integrated in St. Johns County, of Times, the paper took a new tack to- lished scores of editorials calculated to Record gave the incident 1½ in. on an direction of Executive Editor Scott delegates who plan to arrive more or biggest story also became the biggest Young Thieriot, a descendant of the Tribune comment: "Because Senator month that the civil rights movement paper's founders. The two men filled Goldwater is the one candidate who enveloped the city. their pages with columnists, both syndican capture large chunks of Democratcated and local, until the census peaked ic votes without conceding to the Dem- riots and violence have been the order at 53. Columnists now cover everything ocrats more than a handful of GOP of the day ever since. But "for a long ton's entry with hearty cheers.

Decent & Dull. Second-ranking daily football team. is the Examiner, which was William Randolph Hearst's pedestal paper, and Covering St. Augustine which still styles itself, somewhat anachmorals: the paper no longer prints story, on the hopeful assumption that if Negroes are generally referred to as cheesecake, and its trucks now pro-nobody pays any attention, the race "Negro demonstrators"; the St. Augus-claim: "Decency—A Family Newspa-problem just might go away. tinians who swing clubs against them par". The Examiner's editorial policy is After a fashion this policy worked are called "white citizens." Mayor Ioplayed a preference neither for Gold water nor for Scranton but for Henry Cabot Lodge: "Don't be surprised in many delegates turn to the handsome Hearst's other San Francisco paper the evening News Call Bulletin, is a blend of unprofitable competitors. Despite it monopoly of the afternoon field, the News Call Bulletin has slipped in circu lation until it is not appreciably larger than the Pacific Coast Edition of the Wall Street Journal. Nevertheless, Editor Thomas Eastham plans to deploy a convention force of 25—some 18 more than the Examiner—by drafting his TV critic, a reporter whose normal assignpartment, and anyone else at hand.

Little Interest. It is William Knoway be disappointed.

Hearty Cheers. Most popular and Tribune gave its heart to Barry Gold-tober, when the first lunch counters. from veterinary medicine (Dr. Frank E. Miller) to sex (Count Marco, a minority party." Goldwater has retion, says Record Editor Harvey Lo-local beautician), frequently at the exmained the Tribune's choice through pez. This posture proved unworkable, thick and thin. It classified Pennsylvania especially after one of the arrested The Chronicle has pledged blanket Governor William Scranton's last-min- picketers turned out to be Mrs. Mal-delegates' wives in search of cows. Edi- ists; it is preoccupied with local bond the Record played the story on Page torially, the paper greeted Bill Scran- issues, civic development and a current One—but beneath a studiously unincrusade to get Oakland a professional formative headline: MORE ARRESTS ronistically, as "Monarch of the Dai- tion struggle in the South: wherever a begun at last to give St. Augustine's lies." Having surrendered its circulation city's newspapers have pitched in to civil rights movement the news promilead to the Chronicle in 1961, the Ex- help, wherever editors and publishers nence it deserves. Record accounts of aminer now lags far behind, 293,000 have worked to stretch the limits of local violence now appear where they to 330,000, and has lost spirit. Succes- local tolerance, there has been a mini- belong: on the front page. But as a sive waves of new editorial manage-ment, all rolling in from Hearst head-quarters in New York, seem to have 7,000) with more modest ambitions. It to accommodate what it considers the improved nothing but the Examiner's has tried to ignore the South's biggest right side.

publican primary, and has since pube which St. Augustine is the seat, the make pleasant reading for the 700-odd inside page. But last April the South's convention coverage: Count Marco, for example, taking note of the convention site, the Cow Palace, announced plans to examine the herd of delegates and offer little of interest to political tour-MADE AS DEMONSTRATIONS CONTINUE HERE.

That headline symbolizes the Rec-It is almost an axiom of the integra- ord's dilemma. As a newspaper, it has per." The Examiner's editorial policy is After a fashion, this policy worked are called "white citizens." Mayor Joset in New York, where Editor in Chief for years. St. Augustine had no race seph Shelley's press conferences are William Randolph Hearst Jr. has dis- trouble to speak of, and when it did, covered in full; the press conferences of

CONTINUED